<img src="images/stories/images/images 071009 RHB logo.jpg"</pre> border="0" width="86" height="64" style="float: left;" />Recently, I had applied for Tesco-RHB credit card. The reason was, I was attracted to the promotion stating that there $$ 5% rebate and near Chinese New Year they even had more rebates which comes up to 8%. style="text-align: justify;">I ve calculate the rebates will able to cover my gst of RM50, then I thought its worth it. Later when I received my RHB credit card statement the rebates was not exactly as they had advertise and I had to pay for the gst. This is really upsetting.. And at the same time OTHER BANK was also giving their customer rebates of 5%. I ve style="text-align: justify;"> called RHB customer service to complaint, they gave me a formula of calculation and its actually on 40% of the 5% rebate and told me that it is stated in their terms and condition. How could they do that? If this is the latest promotion given, isn t it right for them to put at least a small text telling us about it, moreover they are still using the banners at banks outlet to advertise about their credit cards. If I knew the promotion/rebates are not genuine, I must as well used OTHER BANK credit card which I had said earlier offering the same rebates and they are genuine as I had seen in my latest statement
